* In a 3-1 vote (Virginia Cole opposed), the School Committee last week voted to meet the Andover Education Conference committee's request for $650 to cover expenses. Mrs. Cole suggested a $700 allocation.

* Resignations of two teachers were accepted by the School Committee Thursday: Third Grade Teacher Marcia P. Stubbs of Andover, resigned because of ill health and English Teacher Margaret C. Smith resigned for personal family reasons.

* The Andover High School guidance department has purchased a mobile occupational library which makes readily available for classroom or library use some 300 folders on various occupations and careers.

Tax Facts Delay Sale

Complicated by a new set of facts is the town approved plan for sale of a parcel of Wood Hill land to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. for construction of a microwave tower and a building to house supporting equipment.

Causing some embarrassment is the recent disclosure that if the sale goes through the town will collect only about $5,000 in taxes instead of the $10,000 promised at town meeting.

The $10,000 tax estimate was based on a total evaluation figure for the tower, building and some $300,000 in equipment. AT&T now reports that state law would permit the town to collect on the tower and the building, but not on the equipment which is taxed by the Commonwealth.

Package Store To Be Permitted

Lively competition for an added package store license OK'd by the state on the basis of the latest certified census count is expected.

The number of such licenses available for any community relates to the population, now at 20,551 in Andover.

Applications for the license are available at the town clerk's office and must be completed by applicants and returned to the clerk no earlier than Nov. 8 and no later than Nov. 12. The Board of Selectmen will assign the license at its Nov. 30 meeting.

Formal application must be made on the proper forms by all interested persons. Letters of interest that pre-date this call for applications cannot be considered.

Education Issues Dominate News

Two education issues dominated the news this week, one which triggered a School Committee vote in direct conflict with a Commonwealth desegregation law, and another (see below) which brought sharp criticism of the U. S. Office of Education and Andover School administrators for their "secrecy" in the handling of an Educational Opportunities Survey.

Members Robert Sherman, Barbara Moody and Virginia Cole (with Dr. Louis Galbiati and William A. Doherty dissenting) voted against permitting Andover teachers to take a classroom racial count as required by the State Department of Education.

As of Wednesday there were no plans for a meeting to reconsider this action even though committee members had been advised that state educational aid can be withheld if the school systems "returns" (which are to include the race count figure) are incomplete.

They are due tomorrow, Oct. 15.

The vote was influenced by the members' objection to the fact that in order to take the survey, a teacher must make a judgment about which of the children in his class are white and nonwhite.

Chairman Sherman said: "I object. This is on the basis of color and this is what we are trying to avoid."

Supt. Erickson told the board that a legality was involved and that the same census had been taken a year ago. He asked for reconsideration of the matter, but no action was taken before adjournment of the Thursday meeting where the question was discussed.

In a telephone interview Thomas J. Curtin of the State Department of Education told the Townsman that the color count is indeed a legal requirement. It is a part of the Commonwealth's new chapter

Townspeople Pay Honor To J. Everett Collins

Some 150 townspeople and guests attended a testimonial at Andover Country Club Wednesday for J. Everett Collins, a member of the present town finance committee and a former selectman.

Mrs. Helen Collins Dooley, chairman for the affair, said the dinner was arranged by a group of Andover residents "who felt the time had come to pay tribute to J. Everett for all the things he has done for the town."

Appearing on the program were Superintendent of Schools Edward I. Erickson, Charles Bowman, a schoolmate and football teammate of Collins' and Walter (Stretch)

Police Officers To Be Questioned

A State Police gaming raid at Town Grill in Elm Square Sept. 29 brought to light information that a few Andover police officers are known to frequent the grill.

Chief David Nicoll said Wednesday that he intends to question the men involved, particularly about whether or not they had prior knowledge of numbers bets being taken at the grill, and if so, why it had not been reported.

The Andover chief asked state troopers to conduct the raid after it was brought to his attention that bets were being placed.

Letters from two Andover fathers objecting to a Federal Educational Opportunities Survey being taken in local schools without advance warning to parents brought rapid-fire questions from members of the School Committee Thursday.

Why had the board not been notified of Andover's agreement to cooperate with the Office of Education? they asked Supt. Edward I. Erickson. Why were instructions given for extra copies of the survey

Service Corps To Train 3,000

A two year plan to recruit, train and place 3,000 volunteers for a broad range of social action programs across Massachusetts has been developed by the Commonwealth Service Corps.

More than 2.2 million man-hours of volunteer service in youth development, mental health, anti-poverty and welfare programs will result from the expansion of Service Corps programs.

Seven hundred and fifty corpsmen have already contributed more than 196,000 man hours of volunteer service in some 40 programs.

Two thirds of the new volunteer corpsmen will serve in programs conducted outside of metropolitan Boston. Service Corps offices in Fall River, Lawrence, Springfield and Worcester will serve as centers for numerous programs.

One thousand new corpsmen will serve for one-year in programs beginning January 1, 1966 and two thousand corpsmen will participate in programs beginning in the fall of 1966.

The new programs, originally scheduled to begin in October, have been stalled by legislative inaction on the state budget for the current fiscal year.

In addition to the funds the Service Corps expects to receive from private sources, and the federal government, the Director has requested $500,000 from the state legislature. Initial House approval of the Commonwealth Service Corps budget fell $200,000 short of the amount requested.

Planned programs include:

- * The counseling of youthful offenders and drop-outs.

- * The tutoring of socially disadvantaged children and the use of teachers' aides to help with the grading of tests, planning of field trips, experiments and demonstrations and individual attention to students who need it.

- * The supplying of individual attention to mental patients, mentally retarded children and young adults. To be closely supervised by professionals.

- * The staffing of information and referral centers to dispense data about programs designed to lift public housing and public assistance recipients out of the "welfare cycle."

- * The staffing of several community anti-poverty projects being conducted as part of the federal anti-poverty program.

Adriance Makes Student Search

James R. Adriance, assistant headmaster at Phillips Academy, returned to Andover Monday, having completed a two week trip for the Academy through the South.

In Pittsburgh, Atlanta, and Washington, D. C., Adriance interviewed prospective P. A. students who have been selected as possible candidates for admission by the Pittsburgh Press, the Atlanta Journal and Constitution, and the Washington Post.

The assistant headmaster spoke at alumni dinners in each of these cities as well as in Charleston, W. Va., Charlotte, N. C., and Richmond, Va., where he and Mrs. Adriance met with parents of boys currently enrolled at P. A. and alumni from the area.

Approximately thirty boys who were originally referred to the Academy by newspapers are currently enrolled at the academy. Among newspapers which have aided the school in its search for talented candidates throughout the country are the Minneapolis Star and Tribune, the Des Moines Register and Tribune, the Boston Herald, the Salt Lake City Tribune, the Evansville Indiana Printing Corp., the Portland Oregonian, and the Pittsburgh Press.

Gravel Swap Saves Money

For the price of the handling, about 30 cents a yard, the town has acquired 10,000 to 15,000 sq. yards of loam in a yard for yard swap of gravel with the contractor developing the Internal Revenue Service Center site.

Manager Richard Bowen said this week that the swap is completed.

It was arranged because the town had an excess of gravel on the Shawsheen road site for the new high school and a shortage of loam.

Without this arrangement, one the manager calls a "stroke of good luck", the town would have had to acquire the necessary extra loam at the bid contract price of $4 a yard. The price of loam runs about four times as high as the price of gravel, the manager said.

In A Word

Giddy

A "giddy" feeling may indicate the presence of a bodily disturbance.

In ancient times, when a person was roused, excited, or excessively merry, he was also said to be giddy but in the sense of being possessed by the gods and demons.

Thus the Anglo-Saxon word gydig literally meant "God-like man," and later developed into giddian, the word for merry.

Our present-day term giddy which denotes a confused, whirling sensation in the head, comes from these superstitious origins.

645, he said. The law is the state's follow-up to the Federal desegregation legislation, he added.

Curtain said that the State Supreme Court has ruled that the law requiring the count expresses the legislative intention and he said it has been further determined by courts that there is no scientific way to test for race, which rules out the possibility of any count based on other than a judgment.

The state department asks for the white, nonwhite information as a means of tracking down de facto segregation situations, Curtain said.

The commissioner can notify the comptroller to withhold state aid from any community which does not supply fully all the data required in school returns, Curtain said.

One member of the Andover committee said this week that though he did not doubt the withholding of aid could be an automatic matter, he would expect the commissioner to give the town a second chance to comply. He expressed the opinion that a reversal of the vote was inevitable.

Two members of the majority on this question indicated also that on the basis of fuller information about why the count is requested, they would favor reconsideration.

Not long ago most people got along very well with 15 or 20 gallons of water per day. Today each city dweller in Massachusetts uses about 70 to 80 gallons per day. By the year 2000 this per capita use is expected to reach 150 gallons.

Human Values Are Debated

John M. Kemper, headmaster of Phillips Academy, and Mrs. Kemper were in Aspen, Colo., last week for a conference on Moral and Ethical Values at Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies.

The Institute was founded in 1949 for the purpose of bringing together business executives with leaders from the professions, government, and academic life to examine important ideas that affect our lives.

The theme of this year's conference was "Man in 1980."

The agenda included discussions on "Forces That Shape Moral and Ethical Values", and the roles which education, religion, the church, the home, and community agencies play in forming these values.

to be destroyed? And why was testing which involved some digging into individual student attitudes permitted without parents being told in advance?

Supt. Erickson offered no excuses for not having told the committee of the testing, but he defended his decision to permit it with the statement that the request had come from the U. S. Department of Health, Education & Welfare and that it had been endorsed by the State Department of Education.

Instructions to destroy extra copies of the student tests were included in printed manuals prepared for teachers handling the survey and the "Why?" came this week from education officials in Washington.

The survey tests given first, third, sixth, ninth and 12th graders were prepared for the Office of Education by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N. J., and are copyrighted. Destruction of extra copies was asked to prevent unauthorized use of the tests and as a copyright protection, according to a HEW spokesman.

The survey in question, given in 5,300 U. S. school systems, was ordered by Congress in the Civil Rights Act, of 1964.

All participating school systems were asked to cooperate on a voluntary basis and persons tested were given the option of refusing. As one parent noted, however, "Children are not in the habit of refusing their teachers."

The purpose of the study, as stated in a HEW bulletin, was "to ascertain inequality of educational opportunity among the six minority groups." HEW added that this being the case, schools with a high proportion of children from minority groups were more likely to appear in the sample. In all, only a sample (5 percent) of schools were covered and not all schools within a single region, state or district included.

Tested in Massachusetts, according to Robert York of the government's Equal Education Opportunities office in Washington, were youngsters in the following cities and towns: Boston, Fall River, Taunton, Framingham, Westford, Lincoln, Sudbury, Holliston, Ashby and Andover.

Data was collected on students' ability, achievement, aspiration levels, background, social characteristics, school experiences and orientations toward succeeding and success.

The testers, intent according to a HEW report, was to examine closely the educational success of similar kinds of students in dissimilar kinds of schools.

From this they expect to learn what school factors most fully promote educational success of minority group children and to progress from this to determining if minority children are as frequently exposed to such "success" schools as are white children.

In communication with state education officials, HEW officials stressed prior to the survey that the fundamental purpose of the testing was to help schools officials improve the education of minority groups, and not to point fingers or make accusations.

In the interest of security (seeing that youngsters being tested could not have prior knowledge of the questions), participating schools were asked to test on Sept. 28 and given Sept. 30 as an alternate date.

Local Objections

Supt. Erickson said in the wake of the first wave of concern over the desirability of permitting the tests to be given in Andover that he had had only two letters and one telephone call from inquiring parents.

The letters, which alerted the School Committee to the fact that the survey had been taken, came from Daniel Frishman, 14 Castle Heights Rd., and R. Wayne Long, 291 S. Main St.

Long objected not only to the fact that school time was taken without the School Committee's knowledge of it, but also to the fact from what he knew of the questionnaire it appeared parts of it could "possibly" be considered an invasion of privacy.

Frishman, who said that he also had felt the tests might represent an invasion of privacy, wrote that after talking to school administrators he had no objection to the content.

He said, however, that he felt that in the future tests which do not evaluate skills should be carefully evaluated by the committee or another group, preferably one made up of people from outside the school system.

(Questions in this section, among those asked of children tested in the Educational Opportunities Survey, are excerpts from copyrighted materials prepared for the U. S. Department of Health, Education & Welfare by Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J.)

Survey questionnaires for the sixth, ninth and twelfth grades included sections on verbal and non-verbal comprehension, reading and mathematics along with the general information questions that have stirred what public discussion there has been about invasion of privacy.

At all these grade levels, students were asked whether they could best be described as Negro, White, American Indian, Oriental or Other. They were also asked to say whether or not they came from Puerto Rican or Mexican American backgrounds.

They were asked to be quite specific about who acts (takes the role of) their mother and father. The seven possible answers included: a real father, living at home; a real father, not living at home; a stepfather; a foster father; a grandfather; another relative; another adult; no one. The response to the question on mothers were identical.

At each of the top three grade levels students were queried about their father's work and given several job classifications (i.e. technical, clerical, salesman) to choose from.

They were asked if their mother works outside the home, about how much schooling each of their parents has had and about such assorted items as whether or not the family has a vacuum cleaner, TV, encyclopedia and daily newspaper.

All of the students in the 6th, 9th and 12th grades were asked for a general estimate ("none, less than half," etc.) of how many white students were in their class last year and how many of their teachers were white during the same term.

All were asked to say, in general terms, how many of their close friends are white. But only the 9th and 12th graders were asked to say, once again in general terms, to what extent they would prefer to have white friends as opposed to those of any other racial classification, and only they were asked: If you could be in the school you wanted, how many of the students and teachers would you want to be white? None, less than half, about half, more than half, all, don't care.

These upperclassmen were asked: How do you and your friends rate socially in (your) school? At the top, near the top, about in the middle, near the bottom?

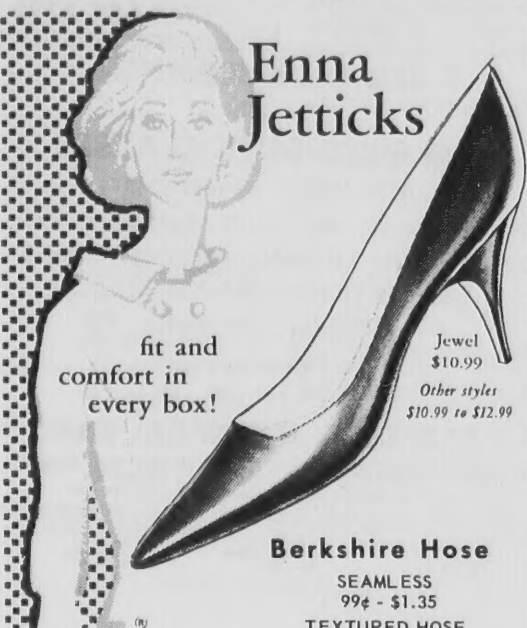

As a measure of attitude, the freshmen and seniors were asked for responses to statements of this type: 1) People who accept their condition in life are happier than those who try to change things. 2) Good luck is more important than hard work for success. 3) People like me don't have much of a chance to be successful in life. 4) If a person is not successful in life, it is his own fault. 5) Even with a good education, I'll have a hard time getting the right kind of job.

All in the top three grades were asked to select from a list of job classifications the sort of job they "think" they will have when they finish their education.

The Lower Grades

Across the country a limited number of first grade boys and girls, including those in Andover, were tested as a measure of their verbal and non-verbal comprehension. The whole of this test was made up of the sort of picture

Educators Quizzed In Survey

The superintendent, principals and teachers were quizzed about their professional qualifications and attitudes. There were also curriculum related questions and others obviously designed to discover to what extent current educational practices and materials are in use.

Relating specifically to the de facto segregation issue was a question to the superintendent which asked for a percentage count on the numbers of white (including a breakdown on Mexican - American and Puerto Rican), Negro, American Indian and Oriental students enrolled in the system. Less specifically, he was asked whether the faculty was all or predominantly white or nonwhite.

Principals were queried about the average age and copyright dates of textbooks being used; about the physical plant of their schools; about the numbers and type (art, music, guidance, etc.) of teachers on their staff and how they are selected; about dropout and college attendance percentages; about the percentages of nonwhite students in classes and the percentages of nonwhite graduates from the class of 1965 who are now enrolled in colleges.

To learn something about the locale of a school and the community or neighborhood served, there were such questions as one about the economic and social background of students enrolled - whether they are all or mostly from professional or white collar homes, from factory and blue collar backgrounds, from rural areas or from a general cross section.

Questions that would reveal even more fully the character of the student body included the following:

1. Is there a problem of destruction of school property?
2. Is there a problem of impertinence and discourtesy to teachers?
3. Is there a problem of tension between racial or ethnic groups?
4. Is there a problem of stealing of a serious nature (money, cars etc.)?
5. Is there a problem of physical violence against teachers?
6. Is there a problem of using narcotics or stimulants?
7. Is there a problem of drinking intoxicants on school property?

Principals were asked as well about school policies relating to slow learners, the numbers and types of extra-curricular activities available and the numbers of students enrolled in remedial courses.

In their questionnaire, teachers were asked to indicate whether, given a choice, they would prefer to teach students from specific economic, social, racial and ethnic backgrounds. They were also given the opportunity to say that they had no preference.

Among the judgment questions asked:

From a realistic viewpoint, there may be some jobs from which Negroes have been excluded. Do you personally feel that a teacher or guidance counselor should encourage Negro students to aspire to such jobs?

In general, what type of institution (Negro or predominantly white) would be best for most Negroes who are going to college?

To give a further measure of the quality of educational opportunity available, the teachers were asked to voluntarily and anonymously answer the questions in multiple choice "verbal facility" test.

These were set up in this manner: Science, art, literature, philosophy and religion are the institutions that (BLANK) great civilizations from mere groups of villages (F) regulate (G) extricate (H) distinguish (J) release (K) save

In pace, the industrial revolution has not been a revolution at all but a (BLANK) change dependent on the ingenuity of individuals and limited by the scarcity of men possessing these qualities.

(F) gradual (G) sudden (H) deliberate (J) doubtful (K) debatable

CURRENT SCHOOL ISSUES

Below is a list of current school issues on which we want the judgments of educational administrators throughout the country. Please answer each in terms of your judgment of the best educational practice.

Which of the following policies on neighborhood elementary schools represents the best educational practice, in your estimation?

(1) Neighborhood elementary schools should be maintained regardless of any racial imbalance produced

(2) Neighborhood elementary schools should be maintained, but where possible a device, such as reducing the grade span of schools, "pairing" schools, or another practice, should be used to promote racial balance

(3) The idea of neighborhood elementary schools can be abandoned without significant loss

Which of the following policies on bussing of elementary school children represents the best educational practice, in your estimation?

(1) Children should not be bussed to a school other than their neighborhood school.

(2) Children should be bussed to another school only to relieve overcrowding

(3) Nonwhite children should be bussed to another school in order to achieve racial balance

(4) Both white and nonwhite children should be bussed into schools with a predominantly different racial composition, to achieve racial balance

Do you believe there is a sound basis in educational policy for giving special programs to culturally disadvantaged students at extra cost per pupil?

- (1) Yes
- (2) No
- (3) Undecided

What type of faculty do you believe is best for a school with an all nonwhite or predominantly nonwhite student body?

- (1) An all-white faculty
- (2) Predominantly white faculty
- (3) About equal number of white and nonwhite faculty members
- (4) Predominantly nonwhite faculty
- (5) All nonwhite faculty
- (6) It does not matter

(7) Selected without regard to race

(8) Some degree of integration, but ratio does not matter

What type of faculty do you believe is best for a school with a racially heterogeneous student body?

The rivers of Massachusetts have become hundreds of miles of free sewers. If, however, proper pollution controls are instituted, many of our major rivers can be cleaned up to a point where again they can be used as a water supply.

The mass reclamation of potholes, wetlands and floodplains has proved detrimental to our underground water resources.

An Illegal Decision

In order to focus attention on what members regard as a matter of principle, the School Committee last week voted to defy State Education Commission orders for a racial head count in Andover schools.

The vote was 3-2, but attitudes on the central issue were not far apart.

The objection was to a procedure which puts the classroom teacher in the position of having to make a judgment about race in a time when there is concerted action to eliminate such distinctions.

It was a decision which ignored the fact that the purpose of the count is to pinpoint school systems which can be suspected of offering unequal educational opportunities to the children they enroll.

And it was a decision which ignored the law, something that cannot be condoned, even in the name of equality. It is legitimate to disagree vocally with statutes, but the legal way to revolt is through support of legislative action.

In this instance, the State Supreme Court has already ruled that the racial count is compatible with what the legislature had in mind when it moved to back Federal desegregation laws with equally strong state measures.

The fact that Andover is asked to take a racial count does not imply that the town supports a segregated school system. It would, in fact, be hard put to do so even if it were of a mind to. The local nonwhite population is negligible.

The state has made the count a part of routine school department record keeping, a legal requirement and among those which influence the distribution of state aid.

If the School Committee feels strongly about the racial survey it should initiate action to outlaw it. Otherwise, it can only protest, and then comply.

Reservations

The attitude of town officials who attended a state sponsored Merrimack River pollution conference in Lawrence last week is that the State Department of Health is pushing too hard for legislation that would create a four-community regional sewer district.

They have reservations about the two-year old bill which has the department's blessing and have, the manager reports, expressed concern that it is too loosely written to deal adequately with the complexities involved.

They are reluctant as well to proceed without time for a detailed public information program on the $21 million filtration plant project and without fuller knowledge about what state and federal aid may be forthcoming. One selectman has even indicated that he objects to rapid action on the grounds that fast-moving developments in the sewerage treatment field could within five years eliminate the need for such costly construction.

We agree that there are sound reasons for making haste slowly. But we urge Andover officials to do whatever they must to keep the subject alive.

The condition of the Merrimack can only worsen as population pressures in every community in the proposed district force additions to facilities for residential and industrial waste.

In Tribute

It is rare to find a man who will give the equivalent of more than 35 years of free service to his community, particularly in non-elective, behind-the-scenes posts that bring no glory and not infrequently criticism.

Yet this is the record of the late Edmond E. Hammond's work for the Town of Andover.

He lent his skills as an investment counsellor to the board of retirement from the date of its founding in 1937 until the time of his death. Beginning in 1958, he also sat as a member of the zoning board of appeals.

The Townsman joins the Board of Selectmen in tribute to "a long-time devoted public servant."

Did You Know . . .

Eighty-two per cent of the total waterborne freight handled at the Port of Boston consists of oil and oil products.

Total freight at the port amounts to 19,792,076 tons annually, of which 16,236,356 tons are oil shipments. If this were all motor fuel, it would be enough to run all the vehicles in Massachusetts for almost three and one-half years.

Elsewhere

A one-day conference devoted to the topic of civic beautification will be sponsored by the Landscape Design Critics' Council of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc. Thursday, Oct. 21, from 9:30 to 3 p.m. at Horticultural Hall, Boston. Guests will be welcomed by Mrs. Carl A. Dahlgren of Concord, N. H., New England regional director and Mrs. Edwin L. Bramley, Andover, federation president.

The advice and guidance of Robert Rucker, chairman of Landscape Design for the National Council of State Garden Clubs, Inc. will be available to all garden club presidents and their civic beautification chairmen in addition to invited officials from their towns.

The 63rd Annual Fair of the Animal Rescue League of Boston will be held at League Headquarters, Tremont and Arlington Sts., from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 28.

Escorted group tours of the League building, including inspection of the famed pet shelters, and the clinic, will be program features. The League Auditorium will be converted into a midway for the day.

The first in a series of four practical sessions on Imaginative Landscapes will be held Oct. 19 at 7 p.m. in Horticultural Hall, Boston, by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Planned for the amateur gardeners the lectures will be conducted by Carlton B. Lees, executive secretary of the society, and author of a book on landscaping.

On Oct. 19, the topic will be "You and Your Home"; Nov. 9, "How to Create a Friendly Front Yard"; Nov. 23, "Backyard Oasis from Wasteland"; and Dec. 7, "The Materials: Plants, Rocks, Pavings, Structures".

A fall retreat for married couples will be held over the weekend of Oct. 22-24 at Espousal Retreat House, Waltham. Catholics as well as non-Catholics may attend for a program planned to bring husband and wife to a more Christian personal relationship.

"The Inhabited Universe," the new show at Hayden Planetarium at Boston's Museum of Science, starts off with an intriguing special effect that gives the audience the illusion of floating under the sea amid coral, sand, seaweed, and fish "talk." Its climax is a trip to Planet X, a mythical land way out in space where conditions on many worlds are rolled into one and low-and-high-gravity creatures live side by side. Before traveling to this wondrous world, the audience views such celestial phenomena as Planet Saturn, the Great Spiral Galaxy of Andromeda (the most distant object visible from earth with the unaided eye), and the double cluster of Perseus.

The second of a two-session symposium on respiratory diseases will be held at Salem Hospital Oct. 13 from 1:30 to 5 p.m. Conducting the session for Essex County physicians will be Arnold Weinberg, MD, Kenneth T. Bird, MD and Francis C. Lowell, MD, all of Harvard Medical School.

Nature's Way

Chestnut Saplings Doomed Before First Buds Unfold

Gaunt as a Gothic design, frail chestnut saplings now shed their leaves in New England forests, many for the last time.

Like a remembrance of things past, these skinny trees spring from the dead and grow toward a quick death. Doomed before their first buds unfold, they serve as reminders of a once-majestic forest community. Chestnuts were the food of the passenger pigeon, the wild turkey, the black bear and the white-tailed deer.

One may see chestnut saplings today in any of the hardwood areas of a New England state forest. They sprout in such areas as the Massachusetts Audubon Society's Moose Hill Wildlife Sanctuary in Sharon. Near the parking area of the New England Wild Flower Preservation Society's Garden in the Woods in Framingham exists a heavy sprinkling of these trees, some of them 15 to 20 feet high.

If one scuffs the earth at the base of these saplings, a reddish-brown patch a foot or two across emerges. This is the crumbling remains of the stump of a once tall chestnut whose roots have tried again to push a tree into the sky. Ironically, many of these stumps contain the secret of why the chestnut, once the king of American trees, no longer exists. The secret is the invisible threads of a mycelium, a fungus plant that conquered the chestnut and still puffs spores to the wind, assuring that its victory was complete.

There are still men alive who in youth gazed upon healthy chestnut trees. Yet, the last wild chestnut tree - or, at least, the last of record - died in 1940. The tragedy began in 1904 when the Oriental chestnut blight was introduced accidentally in New York City. Within 10 years, chestnut trees were dying along the coast from Maine to North Carolina. The spread was swift and thorough, for the spores of the chestnut fungus traveled on the wind. It required no insect messenger as the Dutch elm disease does.

The U. S. Forest Service is referred to the devastation wrought by the chestnut blight as "a record not approached by that of any other disease or insect."

The scientists' battle against chestnut blight was valiant. It was marred, however, by administrative stupidity and private greed that disregarded basic human interests. The goal was a chestnut strain resistant to the blight.

In Chico, Calif., government scientists announced that they had succeeded in developing a resistant strain of American chestnut. In the accompanying avalanche of scientific papers, the records of the tree's parentage were lost. The cap the flasco, the tree itself disappeared.

In Maryland, the government leased acreage near a U. S. Department of Agriculture research station. The woodland was planted with a galaxy of hybrid chestnuts which promised to combine the resistance of the Oriental chestnut with the valuable wood of the American chestnut in the same tree.

When the experiment seems near a solid footing, the lease expired and the landowner announced he had a better offer for use of the land and bulldozed the experimental forest flat.

One may guess at what future generations may conclude from such handling of the most valuable American forest tree. Possibly will be overshadowed by monumental blunders we are committing today.

Wayne Hanley, Audubon Society

What Our Readers Say—

To the Editor of the Townsman: A number of years have passed since my brothers, my sisters and I attended the local public schools.

We have nothing but wholesome and pleasant memories. The school doors were always open to any individual who wished to avail himself or herself of the privilege of learning regardless of race, creed or color. The same kind of spirit holds true today.

Certainly no criticisms could be made on the educational standards. Those at the helm know what it takes to keep abreast of the times through workshops, refresher courses and summer schools. They aren't by any means resting on their laurels. The Office of Education should have no reason to probe for the worst it might hope to find, thus making mountains out of mole hills when there weren't any in the first place.

It seems justifiable to say that the Brains who compiled the so called survey would have done better had they stopped at "aptitudes" and not delved into a family's private life. The whole procedure is a direct insult to the teachers and students, also an indirect insult to the parents whether they be rich or poor; colored or white. The crude part of the matter is (in spite of the polished attempt to be tactful) the underlying point of attack involves the Negro primarily. It is NOT the Oriental, the American Indian, or others. The School Committee is to be commended for its strength of courage to reject the issue.

Andover has always been a town of culture, good citizenship, progressiveness, peaceful communication, excellent juvenile decorum and open mindedness. Truer words were never spoken than these - "Let Well Enough Alone." Under any barrage, Andover without a doubt could have been by-passed.

Collins was born in Andover April 27, 1894 and graduated from Pynchard High in 1913.

He represented the Fifth District in the General Court from 1941 to 1954 and was an Andover selectman and assessor for more than 20 years.

He is perhaps most widely known as organizer and director of the Andover Male Choir. He is also part-time vocal instructor for the Andover school system.

Over the years Collins has been active with such groups as the Andover Service Club, the Squam & Compass Club, the Andover Choral Society, the Little League Andover Boosters' Assn. and a director of music for the First Calvary Baptist Church, Lawrence.

A World War I veteran, he has been a member of both the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars and during the war he served as president of the Andover Servicemen's Fund.

Collins was given a money purse and a wallet by his friends and his wife, who will celebrate her birthday later this month, was given an orchid. The couple will celebrate a 45th wedding anniversary on Oct. 16.

Among out of town guests attending the banquet was a official of the New England Federation of Music.

Serving with Mrs. Dooley on the committee for arrangements were Earl Simon, principal of South School and a member of the Male Choir, Albert Pattarunis, Mrs. William Watson and Tax Collector James Christie.

New Comet Is Now On View

A recently discovered comet, the moon, planets Mars and Venus, the star Antares, and the Orionid meteors will be principal actors in an unusual, changing sky drama which will take place between now and the end of the month.

And there's a very good chance that the comet - named Ikeya-Seki for its Japanese discoverers - may steal the show.

The Hayden Planetarium at Boston's Museum of Science says that for a brief time on the evening of the 20th, Ikeya-Seki may put on the best celestial show of the year as it swings around the sun. In fact, it could be one of the most spectacular comets of the century, rivaling the appearance of Halley's Comet in 1910.

These celestial travelers are believed to be loose collections of ice, frozen gases, and dust. As they approach the sun, material is blown away from them by a stream of solar particles known as the solar wind. Thus a comet tail is formed, sometimes extending for more than 100 million miles.

On the 20th, Comet Ikeya-Seki is expected to come within 300,000 miles of the sun and may become bright enough to be seen in daylight. After sunset, the long tail may be seen arching up from the western horizon. Before and after that date, the object should be visible in the east before sunrise.

Vale Browns Lead League

The Ballardvale Browns moved into first place in the Andover Junior Football League Saturday, with a 13-7 win over the Shawsheen Patriots, featured by Doug Hamilton's TD pass to Dick Homewood. The other Browns' tally was scored by Gary Buchan. Ted Palmieri was responsible for the lone Patriots

Buffer Area Is Enlarged

An 80 foot buffer area will be provided between parking areas at the Internal Revenue Service Center, now under construction on Lowell St., and the property lines of Lovejoy Street residents whose property backs up to the IRS site.

Paul Lazzaro, New England regional director for GSA, told the Townsman Wednesday that government engineers have made some changes in site development plans which he feels will be satisfactory to homeowners who two weeks ago opposed the cutting of a stand of trees which they considered a visual buffer.

Somewhere within the 80 open area planned, two rows of trees will be planted, Lazzaro said. Trees which can be expected to form a fairly solid screening will be chosen.

In another game the Indian Ridge Packers edged the Central Colts 9-7. Dave Hixon scored the Packer touchdown and Bob Waldie provided the winning margin by tackling a Colt back in the end zone for a safety. Biff Moriarty went over for the only Colt touchdown.

As a result of Saturday's action, the Browns are in first place with a record of 2-0. The Packers and Patriots are tied for second with a win and a loss each. The Colts trail with two losses.

Watering Ban Back In Force

Andover homeowners are to get back to hand watering by pail.

This is the word from Town Manager Richard Bowen who said Wednesday that the period for temporary lifting of the ban for the watering of evergreens has ended. No hose or sprinkler watering of lawns or other greenery is to be permitted. The ban on car washing continues.

He said that the town had had a "bad experience" with its two-week respite, given for the express purpose of allowing property owners to water evergreens before the frost. He said that too many residents got the impression that the ban had been lifted altogether.

Ravens resumed breeding in a remote area of New Hampshire's White Mountains a couple of years ago, after a lapse of a human generation.

Dr. Morton B. Green, OD, 11 Chandler Rd., has been promoted to the rank of Lt. Colonel, MSC, U. S. Army Reserve.

Col. Green, who practices optometry in Lawrence, is the executive officer of the 331st General Hospital, USAR, in that city.

He has been in the reserves almost 20 years, joining an artillery control unit in Lowell in 1946, following discharge from active duty where he served as an artillery battery officer from 1942 to 1946.

Col. Green received three battle stars in campaigns in Italy in World War II and received from other campaigns the Philippine Liberation Ribbon, the Japanese Occupation Ribbon, and the Asiatic Campaign Ribbon. He also received the World War II Victory Medal and the Armed Forces Reserve Medal.

He joined the 331st General Hospital in 1950 as Optometry Officer, and is now second in command to Col. Peter B. Hagopian.

He was graduated from Lowell High School in 1936, where he was Colonel of the school's ROTC unit, and from the Massachusetts College of Optometry in 1939.

Women's Wear Daily says: "An industrial 'spy school' has been opened in Tokyo to train personnel of Japanese big business in (the) art of industrial espionage and counterespionage. Curriculum deals with how to steal a competitor's sales promotion program, how to protect your own company's program from being lifted by a rival firm. Advanced student work deals with use of special cameras and how to sift useful information from trade publications."

$11 Million Budgeted For Training Jobless

More than 11 million dollars will be spent in the coming year to train Massachusetts unemployed under the various manpower training programs, such as the Manpower Development and Training Act and the Economic Opportunity Act, according to J. William Belanger, director of the Division of Employment Security.

Belanger said this will permit the training of some 8,000 jobless men, women, and young persons in new skills needed in today's labor force. The job training is given in vocational schools and other training facilities throughout the state through cooperative arrangement between the Division of Employment Security and the Division of Vocational Education.

The determination of occupational needs and the selection, referral, and job placement of new trainees is provided by the Division of Employment Security, while the instruction is given by the Division of Vocational Education.

Currently there are 3340 unemployed undergoing training in 50 different skills which are in short supply in Massachusetts industry. Another 2638 have already been trained, 70% of whom went to work in an occupation using their new skill.

The funds for training are provided from a Congressional appropriation made to the U. S. Department of Labor which in turn allots them to the two state agencies. Funds cover the cost of instruction, training facilities, and cash allowances for the trainees.

The state director said that the successful training of 8,000 in the year which began July 1 will depend on the availability of applicants and the establishment of additional school facilities in which the training can be given. He said the Massachusetts vocational facilities in which most of the courses are being given are being strained to capacity. The manpower courses, for the most part, are being given during periods when these schools are not in use for their regular vocational training classes. Belanger said that unless something is done to provide for expanded facilities, the goal of 8,000 trainees would be difficult to reach.

The 11 million dollars which Massachusetts expects to receive for training this year is an increase from seven million allocated last year and three million of year before. Not only have training funds been increased during the years, but the portion of the national total for training has been increased each year. In the fiscal year 1963-64, the state allotted 2.9% of the national training funds; in 1964-65, 3.6% will be allotted 3.8% in 1965-66.

Mission Accomplished

The library re-opened yesterday with service to children in the usual quarters and service to adults and young adults on the top floor in the Memorial Hall. The main floor is being taken over by the builders for the new addition and remodeling.

Features of the new accommodations include an enlarged browsing collection of 1,500 books, most of them fiction, and more space for the reference collection. Librarians and pages will be glad to bring additional books when requested from storage on the lower floors.

Between the dates of Oct. 6 and Oct. 8 various groups of loyal Memorial Hall Library readers turned their hands to the less literary pursuit of helping with the mass moving of books from the main reading room to the upstairs meeting room which will be the library's headquarters for the next few months.

While the addition to the library is under construction, books will be checked out from this second floor hall.

Assisting with the moving project were the following residents:

Peterson, Mrs. Herbert Lake, Mrs. Dudley Fitts, Miss Joan Arnold, Mrs. Joseph Dodge, Mrs. Edward Gordon, Mrs. George Sanborn, Mrs. Edward Flint, Mrs. Edmond Hammond Jr., Mrs. David

BUSINESS PROFILESThe Best In Hearing Aids

Sonotone's manager in the Greater Lawrence area is Mrs. Theresa Manzi Amore. She has been affiliated with Sonotone - the House of Hearing - for 15 years. During this period, she has brought happiness, through the help of hearing, to hundreds of people. She also visits and takes care of the elderly in rest homes and hospitals. Mrs. Amore has been testing the hearing of the children of St. Augustine's School in Andover now for twelve years. Each child is tested individually. Children's hearing problems are Mrs. Amore's specialty. And Mrs. Amore would be more than glad to serve you. All that you have to do is call 682-4730 for a free hearing check-up that can be conducted either in your home or at her Sonotone office located in the Bay State Building in Lawrence. Then, Mrs. Amore will be able to evaluate your loss of hearing immediately and extend to you her expert advice concerning your hearing problem. If necessary, she can fit you to one of Sonotone's hearing aids - the type of which would depend on your present hearing ability. So, if you've been experiencing hearing difficulties lately, it would, of course, be wise to give Mrs. Amore a call for an appointment soon. Or, when you are in Lawrence next, maybe it would be more convenient to drop in at the Sonotone office, rooms 315 and 316, in the Bay State Building, and have your hearing check-up. There's absolutely no charge for this fine service offered by Mrs. Amore.

Committee Woman Wants Assistant To Supervise Elementary Schools

An assistant superintendent of schools responsible for supervision of elementary principals and the educational program in the first six grades is proposed by School Committeewoman Virginia Cole.

She would establish a master's degree in education as a minimum requirement for the job, and in presentation of ideas to the committee Thursday, she indicated that candidates with a doctor's degree or credits toward it should be preferred. She also favors selection of an administrator with elementary school experience in more than one system.

Her job description calls for an assistant with more specific areas of command than the position outlined by Supt. Edward I. Erickson some weeks ago when he asked the school policy board for creation of a new supervisory post. Basically, Erickson recommended a man with broad responsibilities for general supervision, of the instructional program of the schools, for direction and coordination of the program of recruitment, selection, orientation and in-service training of all professional personnel and for communication between the superintendent, administrators and faculty on curriculum matters.

Mrs. Cole, however, suggests creation of a line position that would put the new assistant in charge of all elementary principals and such across-the-board elementary staff people as art, music and physical education instructors reading specialists, guidance people etc.

Committee Chairman Robert Sherman scheduled consideration of the Cole plan for the group's next meeting and gave it a verbal nod by pointing out that it would create a position that would not place the assistant in competition with the superintendent. He indicated with an organizational chart that Mrs. Cole's assistant would have personnel reporting to him while no one is slated for responsibility to the assistant in Erickson's proposal.

Under the Cole plan, an assistant would be responsible to Erickson for these elementary school functions: curricula development and coordination; recommendations of text books and instructional materials; teacher recruitment, selection and recommendations for hiring; teacher orientation; in-service training; teacher supervision; teacher evaluations, including recommendations for tenure.

Excluded from his area of concern would be any responsibility for elementary school business affairs such as purchasing, maintenance etc.

40 Years Serving New England

This is a job for Anton's

Everybody likes to make a splash at a party — but not this way! No need to worry, though; Anton's will take that dress and make it just as fresh and chic-looking as the day it was bought. That's because Anton's knows how to treat even the most delicate fabrics with tender, loving care... presses the most elaborate styles with an eye to how they were designed... and always makes you oh-so-glad you chose the one and only Anton's.
